

Many countries produce wine, but the best are found between 30° and 50° latitude - in both the northern and southern hemispheres. If this means nothing to you, click here for a map that explains it a bit better.

Below you will find links to the main wine-producing countries. If you want further information, there are links to specific regions within each country. Our team of contributors (each one a specialist in their region) helps to ensure that the most important and current information that you want is available.

If you would like to join the corkhound team as a contributor, please contact us at editorial@corkhound.com